PETALING JAYA: The transfer of non-Covid-19 patients from the public to private hospitals to make room for Covid-19 patients has been ongoing since the announcement of the state of Emergency, said Health Ministry secretary-general Datuk Mohd Shafiq Abdullah (pic).

"This is not a new directive. As stated by Prime Minister Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin on Jan 11, with the announcement of the state of Emergency, all private healthcare resources would be roped in to assist in the management of the pandemic," he said yesterday.

KUALA LUMPUR: The public-private partnership (PPP) in Malaysia's healthcare system needs to be further strengthened in order to prepare the country to face any possible pandemic in the future.

Taking the Covid-19 pandemic as an example, the president of the Association of Private Hospitals Malaysia (APHM) Datuk Dr Kuljit Singh said the private hospitals are capable enough to help the government especially on decanting process, or the transfer of a portion of non-Covid-19 patients.

- Building Blocks for HealthCare Financing
- One HealthCare system?

- Yet, the RM32.41 billion for the Ministry of Health, reflects only about 2.1% of gross domestic product (GDP) — within the usual range of 2% to 2.5% of GDP that the country spends annually but below the average of 3.84% of GDP that the World Bank calculates was spent by upper middle-income countries in 2018. Malaysia would fall short of that average even if the entire health-related expenditure under the Covid-19 Fund for 2020 to 2022 were to be included. The Malaysian Health Coalition has more than once called for the country's healthcare allocation to be raised to at least 4% of GDP.

"We had met with Prime Minister Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin on Tuesday and had told him we are happy to assist the government for both Covid-19 and non-Covid-19 patients based on our capability and capacity," Association of Private Hospitals Malaysia's (APHM) president Datuk Dr Kuljit Singh (file pic) told StarBiz.

PETALING JAYA: Private hospitals are ready to assist the government to rein in the Covid-19 pandemic.

"We had met with Prime Minister Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin on Tuesday and had told him we are happy to assist the government for both Covid-19 and non-Covid-19 patients based on our capability and capacity," Association of Private Hospitals Malaysia's (APHM) president Datuk Dr Kuljit Singh (pic) told StarBiz.

The stakeholder approach to business sees integration rather than separation, and sees how things fit together.
