

2026 Environmental Youth Leader Awards Ceremony & "Change Begins with You" Networking Salon

I. Objectives

To empower Taiwan's youths to exert their influence, engage with critical environmental issues, and take actionable steps, the Ministry of Environment (MOENV) is proud to continue the Environmental Youth Leader Selection. We are looking for passionate, mission-driven young trailblazers who are dedicated to making a lasting environmental impact.

Not only will this year's ceremony and networking salon celebrate the outstanding achievements and innovative contributions of our youth leaders, it will also feature inspiring keynotes and panel discussions with top experts from various fields. By bringing different generations together, we aim to inspire young minds to expand their horizons beyond environmental protection to encompass social and humanitarian issues, and to turn their vision and empathy into real-world change.

V. Panelist Biographies

Dr. Chi-ming Peng, with a Ph.D. in Atmospheric Sciences from National Central University, is a meteorologist, entrepreneur, and seasoned media personality. He founded Taiwan's first private meteorological company, advancing the application of climate technology and big data. Having participated in 11 United Nations Climate Change Conferences, he is dedicated to aligning Taiwan with global environmental trends. With 17 years of experience as a weather anchor, he has long led a plant-based, low-carbon lifestyle and actively promotes environmental sustainability. Drawing on his outstanding track record across industry, government, and academia, he was appointed Minister of Environment in 2024 to lead Taiwan in implementing its net-zero transition.

Marilyn Su currently serves as the Chief Sustainability Officer of Carrefour Taiwan and CEO of the Carrefour Cultural and Educational Foundation. She is a pivotal figure in advancing the "Food Transition" and sustainable business practices within Taiwan's retail industry. Advocating for "altruism and mutual benefit" and animal welfare (such as cage-free eggs), she effectively leverages retail channels to connect NGOs with producers, thereby creating a sustainable ecosystem. In recognition of her innovative strategies, she was awarded the APSAA Asia-Pacific Top CSO (Chief Sustainability Officer) Award in 2023.

Chih-yung Lee is the current Director of West District Operations at the Taipei Culture Foundation. With a background in cultural anthropology and museology, he specializes in cultural heritage preservation, the development of cultural and creative industries, and large-scale festival management. He has served as the Director General of the Cultural Affairs Bureau of Yilan County, Director of both the Business and Educational Departments for the Sunmake Cultures Foundation at the National Center for Traditional Arts (Yilan), and Secretary-General of the Oriental Cultural Heritage Sites Protection Alliance. He possesses extensive experience in cultural administration and business management.

Han-wei Chang, formerly an engineer at TSMC, transitioned into the sustainability sector driven by her concern for climate-vulnerable communities. She currently serves as the Deputy Secretary-General of the Taiwan Green Energy for Charity Association. Previously, she was the Chairperson of the Taiwan Youth Climate Coalition and a member of the Executive Yuan's Youth Advisory Committee. Bringing practical experience from attending four UN Climate Change Conferences, she also acts as an advisory committee member for both the Ministry of Environment and local governments. Specializing in youth empowerment, net-zero communication, and climate education, she is dedicated to integrating cross-disciplinary resources and fostering civic engagement to align Taiwan with global sustainable development goals.
